Two indictments charged Lincoln with attacking Carol Williams, 9, Joliet farm girl, whom he admitted beating with a hammer and shooting with a .22 caliber rifle on March 20. The third indictment involved an attempt to rape Darlene Wood, 10.

Lincoln's trial, set for yesterday, was postponed when his attorney, Lloyd D. Heth, said Lincoln needed time to have mental tests taken. Mr. Henry Bruggeman and Mr. R. L. Rooker of Tinley Park each have a pear tree growing on their premises and each tree is in bloom now for the first time. The trees were planted 39 years ago. We will watch this tree to see how much fruit it provides for canning.

Mokena Resident For 67 Years, Dies

Mrs. Sophie Klatt, aged 85, a resident of Mokena for 67 years passed away Friday, April 26 in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Andrew Cappel in Mokena.

Mrs. Klatt nee Warning was born in Mechenburg, Germany, Nov. 2, 1861. She came to this country with her parents when 18 years old, and settled in Mokena where she has lived ever since. On Aug. 28, 1883 she was united in marriage with Mr. Fred Klatt. To them were born four children two of whom died in infancy.

She was a Charter member of the Woman's Guild of St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena when it was organized in 1892. Her husband passed away in 1942 and since that time she has lived alone except for a period of illness two years ago and recently when she was cared for in the home of her daughter.

She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Andrew Cappel, one son Fred Klatt of Joliet, three brothers Fred of Frankfort, John of New Lenox and Geo. of Mokena, two grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena Monday afternoon with the pastor Rev. Wm. Riemann officiating. Burial was in St. John's cemetery in Mokena.

Service Men's Papers Discontinued

It was in March 1942, four years ago that we started to send this news paper to the boys in service. The Tinley Park Legion Post first offered to cooperate with us by paying the postage, if we would send the paper, which we were only too glad to do.

In a short time, in cooperation with the Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Mokena the paper was going to the boys from Mokena. In New Lenox the United Service Club cooperated by paying the postage, so then the boys from New Lenox were added to our servicemen's list. Next the Orland Park Legion Post co-operated, and then the paper went to the Orland Park boys. In Frankfort the Girls 4H club sponsored the paying of the postage for a while, and were glad to add the Frankfort boys to our growing list. In Lincoln Estates, the Community Club wanted their boys to receive the paper so another group of boys, gone to do their bit for their country, was added. Finally the list grew to over 600 papers a week, and then it was necessary to have help in the addressing of them.

Inasmuch as there were changes of addresses each week, we could not make an address stencil, so each wrapper had to be addressed by typewriter and therefore in New Lenox, three people divided their list of over 200 each week, and addressed the wrappers, which was furnished by this paper in each instance. In Tinley Park one or two persons offered to do that work, and so it was in each instance, except in Lincoln Estates, which we addressed in our office, as their group of boys were not more than forty and we were able to handle them.

All these people sent or brought the addressed wrappers to our office no later than Thursday and that evening, which always ran way past midnight, we wrapped the Service Men's papers, happy in the knowledge that to those who did receive it, some home comfort was brought to them.

In the wrapping of these papers, several neighborhood young people and sometimes older ones also, who wanted to do something for "the Boys" came to the shop on Thursday evenings and helped in a big way, wrapping. The list is too many to name all who helped in this work, but we do thank each and every one who had even a small part in this "line of defense."

For some time, we have been discussing this matter and several weeks ago decided that because we are not in war any more, and mainly because of the shortage of paper and the increase in its cost, and because of another scheduled increase in cost, that we would not mail the papers free to those in service any more. The majority of the boys are home and for some time, we have noticed that the papers which we sent out faithfully each week, have not been received by the boys, which makes it impractical to continue sending them.

To those who are entering the Peace Time Draft, we feel the issue is somewhat changed inasmuch as they are not facing the thought of combat, altho they may be lonely because of being away from home and friends. But if there are those who still want this paper who are in service, they still may have it, especially those in this country, by subscribing for it. We would not urge a subscription for those overseas as it does not seem that they are receiving it.

To all the Boys, we are happy to have been of some small joy to you, and to all those who co-operated so faithfully with us, we say thank you from the bottom of our hearts.

Relatives Plant Crops For Sick Man

Recently Mr. Lester Schiek, Mokena dairy man added 25 acres more to his farming activities, but when the spring work was ready he was unable to proceed because of a severe attack of rheumatism. This finally caused him to seek treatment in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet where his physician, Dr. E. G. McMahon decided diseased tonsils were causing much of his pain.

Last week Richard Erickson and Stanley Brown, relatives of Mr. Schiek, sowed his oat crop for him. This was a manifestation of the much talked about "good neighbor policy."

While Mr. Schiek is taking these treatments his mind is at ease knowing his crops are in.

The dairy is being operated efficiently by his wife, son and daughter. His many friends hope he will soon be able to return home and take up his dairy activities again.

PROGRESS IN VILLAGE PARK IMPROVEMENTS

The Village Board of Mokena and Boy Scout Troop No. 40 have combined forces for the improvement, equipment and maintenance of the village park. Trees have been trimmed, rubbish removed and an attractive fireplace has been built. Two picnic tables will be ready and placed in the near future. In addition the completed improvement plans call for the working, leveling and reseeding of the lawn, a tennis and volleyball court and archery range, drinking fountain and park lights.

Other civic groups are invited to lend a hand and help to finance this local improvement. Donations, for developed lilac and honeysuckle bushes for screening are requested. A cooperative endeavor of this kind should appeal to every civic minded person and group. There is much need for the provision of day and twilight sports for young and old.

NEW LENOX MERCHANTS LEAGUE WINDS UP BOWLING SEASON

The Sherwood Tavern five copped the trophy after trailing for thirty of the thirty three game series. The winners are: Roland Woodcock, Leonard Troughton, George Koehler, Ralph Attaway and Edward Butzen.

Captain Roland Woodcock modestly explained his team came to the top as a result of a happy accident. After floundering between second and fifth positions from September to April it found its stride when low man George Koehler jumped into first place. The resulting rivalry between members of the team lifted the Sherwood boys into first place where they remained thru the final three weeks.

This is the second winning in a row for the Sherwood Tavern five. They won the championship last season too and now are setting their sights on the top place in next winter's games. Tony Perotti, proprietor of the New Lenox Recreation center presented the fine trophy ornamenting the bar at Sherwood's tavern. He also arranged to have the winning team photographed.

Jim Sherwood plans a dinner for members of the team and their wives as soon as arrangements can be completed.

The league will enjoy their annual bowling dinner May 8 at 7:30 at Schragge's Inn. At this time the cash prizes will be awarded the winning teams.

Hero Aids Woman To Cheat Death By Fast Train

The Oak Park avenue Rock Island crossing in the heart of Tinley Park was the scene of a very dramatic accident Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Mrs. Lillian Harper, 50, of 184th St. and LeClaire Ave., Tinley Park, a widow who has moved to Tinley Park about 3 days before coming from Chicago was literally snatched from the jaws of death by Mr. Geo. Gibbons, 7136 Prairie Ave., Chicago, foreman of the County Highway Maintenance Crew.

Mrs. Harper was driving north on Oak Park Ave. on her way to the office of Dr. R. H. Carmichael when her automobile suddenly stalled in the middle of the crossing and at the same time the Rock Island east bound Rocket was approaching at better than 60 miles per hour. Mrs. Harper became confused and evidently did not see the streamliner and started walking on the railroad tracks where foreman Gibbons' men were working near by seeking their aid to push her car from the crossing. Mr. Gibbons saw the rocket approaching and ran upon the tracks, reaching Mrs. Harper and carried her to safety. An instant later the Rocket struck the stalled car hurling it into a group of parked commuters cars on the North side of the Rock Island depot.

Two of the commuters cars were damaged when the wrecked car was hurled against them. They belonged to Milton Moschel and Clarence Hagedorn of Tinley Park.

A portion of the heavy wire fence between the East and West bound tracks was torn up and also one of the concrete electric light posts at the depot.

The Rocket continued for about a quarter of a mile before it could be stopped. The engineer Gus Powell of Blue Island, ascertained that no one was hurt then continued on to Chicago.

A large crowd gathered to view the wreckage and quite a number of amateur photographers were on the scene taking pictures.

This same crossing was the scene of a tragic accident a few years ago when another car stalled on these tracks and was hit by a Westbound fast passenger train killing a mother and her little daughter.

RUSS DON'T LIKE U. S. A.

WASHINGTON. — Inside reason why the Russians are pulling wires to have the capital of the United Nations moved back to sleepy Geneva is that American public opinion has been too powerful a champion of the smaller nations.

So the Russians have been working behind the scenes to corral votes in favor of the Geneva transfer and can count on Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland and France. However, they can't count on the British, who once favored a European capital, but are now 100 per cent sold that American opinion is one of their best allies.

The Russians also can't count on the Latin Americans. In the old days, Pan-American diplomats loved lolling in Paris most of the time and turning up in Geneva a few days of the week. Today, however, Paris is one of the most uncomfortable places in the world. Geneva is short of food, and New York is far more pleasurable.

The Russians, who originally favored an American city as the U. N. capital, now consider this a serious mistake. They dislike the fact that American newspapers publish columns and columns of front-page news on every move made by the Russians and they figure that American newsmen at Geneva would sit drowsily in the Swiss cafes drinking beer, or spend week-ends in the Swiss Alps.

In Europe, they also believe, no photographer or newspaper would have the energy to trail Ambassador Gromyko on his famous and circuitous trip around New York City when he almost stopped in at the Security Council meeting, but didn't.

If the Iranian question had been discussed at Geneva, instead of New York, the Russians figure, it never would have attracted so much attention and the Soviet would have come off with a complete victory.

NO ARMY RACE PREJUDICE

A Negro, former master sergeant in the army, Marion F. Green, testified before General Doolittle's "caste system" board the other day, that there was little evidence of racial prejudices and discrimination in the army. When General Doolittle inquired about this, Sergeant Green replied:

"Colored soldiers found some resentment against them when they first joined the army, but this was quickly ironed out after a few months of training. In February, 1941, we had some fights and riots while I was stationed at Camp Livingstone, Louisiana. However, by the time we finished training, everybody was getting along fine. I encountered no racial bias whatever overseas."

The ex-G.I. also suggested that saluting of officers be optional when enlisted men are off duty and off the post, to which Lt. Gen. Troy Middleton, now an executive of Louisiana State university, countered: "Wouldn't optional saluting such as you propose tend to tear down discipline?"

"Not necessarily, general," replied Green. If a man does something to merit respect, he will get that respect whether he is a civilian or an army officer."

POWER AND NYLON LOBBIES

Many congressmen will vote against dynamic Speaker Sam Rayburn in a secret committee session, but don't have the nerve to stand up and oppose him on the floor of the house. Very soon, however, Democrats who have fallen for the beguiling promises of the giant power lobby are going to face the latter test.

Sam Rayburn really has fire in his eye when he talks about the power lobby. And today that lobby ranks with the real estate buttonholers as one of the most potent on Capitol Hill, has even gone to the extent of dangling nylons before the wives of congressmen in order to win votes against the government's southwest power authority in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and southern Missouri.

The question at issue is whether the government can construct its own electric lines to distribute electric power from the Denison dam on the Texas-Oklahoma border and the Norfolk, Ark., dam. Without such power lines, the government merely generates the power but can't sell it. The power lobby wants to prevent this sale.

So far, the power lobby's technique has been successful with the appropriations subcommittee, which knifed the construction of the distributing lines. Cong. Ben Jensen of Iowa, Henry Dworshak of Idaho, Robert Jones of Ohio, and W. F. Norrell of Arkansas were the gentlemen reported to have fallen for the wiles of the lobby.

However, when the bill comes out on the floor of congress, Sam Rayburn, together with the dean of congress, Adolph Sabath of Illinois, plans to stage a real battle.

TURNING POINT

By Mary Imlay Taylor

W. N. U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Jane returned from the cabin, and Jim told her he had phoned the sheriff to come and get Sherwin. Jane turned white. She mounted again and rode off, Jim after her. Soon they could see Stenhart and the sheriff racing ahead. Jim finally stopped Jane's horse. Sherwin was standing on a cliff, Stenhart crawling along a ledge. Sherwin waited, suddenly he confronted his cousin. Then Stenhart crumpled, reeled backward and fell over the ledge. He was caught by a dwarfed tree, limp but not dead. Sherwin looked down and in that moment came the turning point. He uncoupled a rope, tied it, and began to descend the cliff.

CHAPTER X

He sought a foothold, a crevice, and found one where the tree had rooted, a wide fissure in the wall of rock. He swung toward it, got his foot into it, and, holding thus to the rope and the cliff, reached down and laid his hand on Stenhart's body. He thought he was still conscious, for his heavy eyelids quivered, but he lay there, a dead weight. Swiftly, cautiously, Sherwin wound the rope around his body and made it secure under the armpits, balancing himself on a foothold so narrow that a touch might hurl him down. Then, grasping the slack of the rope, he began to climb. The ledge seemed a thousand feet above him, but, at last, he lay on its brink, gasping.

He heard sounds now other than the cataract, the crashing of boughs, voices! He took no heed of them, for, as he rose to his feet, he saw the tree that supported Stenhart go down and the motionless body swing out on the end of the rope. Sherwin braced himself and began to haul him up by main strength. Slowly, surely, he drew his enemy out of the abyss, steadied him at the edge of the rock, brought him safe over and laid him down. His own muscles ached and his head swam, but Stenhart still breathed. He opened his eyes and looked up in Sherwin's face. Sheer terror leaped into his eyes, but he was spent, helpless; his white lips moved, but only one word came in a whisper.

"Water!"

A mountain spring was trickling close at hand, and Sherwin cupped the water in his hands and wet his face and lips, and again Stenhart tried to speak; but, as his rescuer bent to listen, heavy hands fell upon him and there was a shout of triumph.

"Get him, Sheriff!"

Sherwin, on his knees beside the injured man, looked up to find the posse closing in. He shook off the man who had grasped him and rose to his feet just as Jim Keller panted up the trail.

"Hold on, Cutler!" Jim cried, "that man saved Stenhart—I saw him—at the risk of his own life!"

"Ain't taking no chances, Mr. Keller. Here you, Adams, you handcuff him; he's the man we're after!"

Sherwin offered no resistance; he submitted with an iron composure. He had thrown away his dear-bought liberty to save Stenhart.

"I reckon he can walk, after all," said the sheriff. "How you feeling now, Mr. Stenhart?"

Stenhart tried to stand upright, but his eyes had met Sherwin's and his mouth went dry. He wet his lips, shaking all over.

"We'd better carry him," said Jim. "Cheer up, old chap, you're sound, no bones broken!"

"I can walk," said Stenhart thickly, leaning heavily on Jim.

"The ledge is mighty narrow; can you manage without help, Mr. Keller?" The sheriff was solicitous for the man who had helped him make his capture.

"Oh, we'll do!" Jim threw a supporting arm around Stenhart. It was on the tip of his tongue to tell the men to go ahead with the prisoner and bring help from the ranch and a car for the injured man, but he remembered Jane; he must go first himself. The thought impelled Jim to look back at Sherwin, and something in his white face made him recoil at the sight of his bound hands. He beckoned Cutler to him. "Is it necessary—I mean, those handcuffs? By Jove, I saw what he did; he's a brave man!"

The sheriff nodded grimly. "Can't take chances, Mr. Keller, he's a jailbreaker; swore he was going to kill Stenhart. I ain't so all-fired clear in my mind what he meant to do with him anyways—he had him all trussed up with that rope!"

They began the descent slowly. Jim, supporting Stenhart, went ahead; behind came the sheriff, then the men bringing Sherwin. A heavy cloud had risen in the west; its purple edges were sweeping upward. The sunlight went out and, as they entered the steep trail, thunder rolled deeply across the hills. The way, narrow and difficult, grew dim with the darkness of the approaching storm. Stenhart, weak and stunned from his fall, stumbled and set the stones rolling and tumbling ahead of them.

"Steady, old chap," said Jim, and his supporting arm tightened. It seemed to him that Stenhart suffered with some trouble of the mind as deep as the stiffness of his body; not once had he lifted his dark eyes to look ahead of him, and he was glancing back at the steep path, saw the feet of the men following them before he saw their bodies. The sheriff came next; Sherwin, he knew, was last—with his guards. Overhead the trees locked their branches now, and a dense thicket surrounded them. They could hear the cataract less distinctly, but the rush of wind in the tree-tops made a tumult. Jim, steady Stenhart, spoke slowly in his ear.

"I saw you—you and Sherwin," he said quietly. "I was out in the road; there's an opening in the trees—one glimpses the ravine. How did you come to fall in that way, Max?"

Stenhart roused himself; he lifted his head and tried to meet Jim's questioning eyes, but he wavered and gasped.

"I—he was going to kill me!" he said weakly; "that was it. I remember now, Sherwin was going to kill me."

Stenhart passed his hand over his eyes with a groping gesture.

"I can't understand it," he muttered; "he was going to kill me—he hates me!"

"Then, by heaven, he did a great thing—he risked his life for his worst enemy! Are you sure, old chap, quite sure—that he was guilty?"

"Sangre de Cristo!" she whispered, awed, "it is a judgment—his dreams, his terrible dreams!"

Stenhart's face took on an ashy whiteness, his lips shook. "I tell you he did it!" he cried wildly. "I—oh, my God, what lightning!"

The heavens had been torn by a jagged flash, the dark woods were, for an instant, ablaze with it; then the roar of thunder rolled crashing around them, echoed from height to height.

Jim, trying to steady him, was suddenly swung aside by the other man's blind agony of terror; the fall had broken his nerve—he was almost hysterical. The rain began to fall in a torrent and Jim, trying to catch up with him again, came abreast of a windswept thicket. He heard the men behind scrambling and shouting and thought of Jane. He had made her stay behind; was she out there still, holding the horses? He grasped Stenhart again and they came to the last lap of the descent. It was dusk in the trail and the rain blinded, but suddenly there was a tongue of flame from the thicket, a sharp report, and Stenhart crumpled up and sagged into Jim's arms. At first he did not sense what had happened; it seemed a part of the tempest, of Stenhart's utter collapse, and then he felt something warm and wet on his hands and knew it was blood.

"Good God, he's shot!" Jim gasped. Then he shouted, but his voice was cut off by a volley of shots. The men behind had been quicker than he; they were crashing into the thicket.

Stenhart, meanwhile, hung heavily against him. "He's got me this time," he murmured. "I'm shot, Jim!" He thought it was Sherwin. But the sheriff came up, panting. "Hit you, did he? Here, Adams, you hold up Mr. Stenhart. I want you—" he hurried Jim;—"we killed the fellow who did it, caught him running—"

They pushed into the thicket, rain dripping from their hats and soaking their clothes. Two of the posse were bending down over a prostrate figure. The dead man had fallen face downward, but they rolled him over and Jim saw his distorted face.

"It's Jordan," he said soberly. "He meant to get me—I'm afraid poor Max is done for!"

"By George, then we've killed two birds with one stone—we've got the outlaw and the escaped convict in one bag! Sorry about Mr. Stenhart—maybe the men had better make a stretcher for him, eh?"

"Some one's got to go to the ranch and get a car—I—" Jim stopped short; he saw Jane coming.

She ran to him and clung about his neck, forgetful of the quarrel. "Oh, Jim, I thought you were hurt or—" her voice trailed; she knew that it was not Sherwin, for she had seen him standing grimly between his guards.

Jim pointed to Jordan. "It's done with, Jane; I'm going to have the poor devil decently buried. Jane, ride back to Las Palomas, get Mac to send the big car and—if she can come through this, send Fanny. I'm afraid poor Max got it bad, he's collapsed—be quick!"

"Jim!" she clung to him, whispering, "you know what he did—Sherwin, I mean—don't let them take him away! Do something, say something! Oh, Jim, you—you must!"

Jim loosed her arms from his neck. "Look here, girlie, I'll promise to do all I can, but for heaven's sake, get out of this quick—get a car. Stenhart may be dying—it may mean a lot to all of us. Quick!"

"Jim, I must speak to him—"

Her brother caught her sternly by the arm and dragged her to the end of the thicket. "Now—go!" he said, "or—I swear I'll have him sent off now!"

Jane caught the look on his face and saw beyond him the death-like face of Stenhart, leaning against two deputies, only partly conscious.

"He's all in!" cried Jim. "Can't you see? Beat it!"

The girl, half crying, ran out into the road. The storm had nearly spent itself and she loosed Tex from the sapling where she had tied him, and springing into the saddle, turned his head homeward.

Her heart reproached her for the relief she felt. When she heard the shots she had thought only of Sherwin and her brother; Jordan had slipped out of her mind. She imagined Sherwin still bent on revenge, though the miracle of that rescue seemed to lift him above such a thought. They were both safe! Poor Max—well, she could pity him, yet, if he knew he had sworn to a lie about his cousin, wasn't it a judgment of God? In a strange tumult of feeling she galloped home, but, all the while, she seemed to vision Sherwin going down into the abyss to save the life of his foe!

"My heart, you are dripping!" Teresa cried, seizing her as she dropped from the saddle; but Jane scarcely heard her.

"Call Mac!" she said sharply, panting, her hands clasped tightly against her breast. "And you, Fanny, you've got to go in the car—Jordan tried to shoot Jim and wounded Stenhart; they're afraid he's dying—"

"Fanny, suddenly white, gasped. "Jim's safe?"

Jane nodded, at last aware of old Teresa. The little brown woman dropped on her knees, crossing herself.

"Sangre de Cristo!" she whispered, awed, "it is a judgment—his dreams, his terrible dreams!"

Jane looked down at her, white-lipped; it was her own thought voiced again. She shivered. Fanny had sped upon her errand, and she was alone with the little old peon woman. The wind swept over them and she looked up; storm-clouds, black and threatening, were rolling around them and the shining peaks were swathed in a mantle of purple. Now and then a red flash tore the black mist asunder, as though some hidden furnace was belching fire in the midst of the canyons. Jane, who knew that Sherwin had given up his hope of freedom to save a life, felt suddenly a thrill of utter pride and thankfulness; nothing mattered so much as that he had cleansed his soul!

They brought Stenhart back to Las Palomas through the driving storm. The wind was snapping branches off the great trees and whipping the rain across the long slope in mighty gusts. The big car came swiftly, followed by the dripping horses and men of the posse. Jane, watching from the veranda, saw Stenhart's white face and closed eyes as they bore him in, but her own gaze was following the drenched figures going down to the men's quarters. She made out Sherwin's tall head, and then the others closed up about him. She drew a quick breath of relief; he was here—Jim had not let them hurry him away. Then she was aware of other things. She, herself, had telephoned for a doctor, but it would be two hours or more before he could reach them; meanwhile Jim and Cutler had carried the wounded man in and laid him on his bed. Fanny, quiet, competent, greatly concerned, was doing all she could; Stenhart had lost consciousness, but now, under her ministrations, he was slowly coming back to himself. Mechanically, Jane obeyed the young nurse's behests, helping as best she could.

Fanny, quietly and deftly at work, suddenly saw the girl's face, and she went over to Jim. He was standing by the door helplessly, staring at Stenhart.

"Take Jane away," Fanny whispered to him, her kind eyes grave and admonishing. "She's borne a good deal today. I can do it all now—until the doctor comes, if he comes in time."

Jim's face fell. "You think—?" She nodded. "He's going to die, Jim, slowly—perhaps it will be bad;—take her away."

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Farm Advice for Vets

The Veterans' Service Bureau is currently receiving scores of letters from veterans, all pertaining to farming—how to get farm loans; how to get farm equipment; farm surplus property; how to build a farm house; to get REA service; to buy farm land, and many other questions pertaining to farming for the veteran.

Answers to these questions can only be general, since conditions vary in many communities, but generally speaking the veteran may find the answers to his questions in his home community, if he but knows where to go. First stop for the farm-bound veteran should be the county agricultural agent. His job is to help all farmers and he has been designated by the USDA to work with returning veterans. His office is usually in the court house. He can answer most of your questions or can refer the veteran to the farm agency working in special fields. All local draft boards have been directed to refer veterans interested in farming to the county agent.

In many agricultural counties, veterans can obtain practical and valuable counsel from working farmers who are serving on the county veterans' advisory committees and this committee also may be approached through the county agent.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son was killed in action April 1, 1943, in the North African area. In November, 1942, he was shipped from New York across, and he did not get his pay from the government for three months and he could not keep up his insurance policy, so it was dropped. I have his letter giving the address as the Pearl Assurance Company, Ltd., of London. Is there any chance of getting insurance on it? Will the body be shipped home if I asked for it?—Mrs. J. P., Hazen, N. D.

A. You would be entitled to your son's back pay, plus six months pay. You may also be entitled to a pension if you are a dependent parent. For your back pay and allowances write to Claims Division, General Accounting Office, Office of Special Settlement Accounts, 27 Pine Street, New York 5, N. Y. For a pension if you are entitled to it, make application to your nearest veterans administration office, probably at Fargo or Bismarck. About your insurance, your son evidently did not take out National Service life insurance, but with a private insurance company in London, and if it lapsed, you could only write to London to obtain its status. Legislation is pending now to authorize shipment of the bodies of American soldiers to the United States under auspices of the army quartermaster department.

Q. My husband was discharged November 21, 1944, and has 70 per cent disability. He has lost all of his papers except his discharge. Can he get new papers and a pension?—Mrs. W. R. F., Montone, Ala.

A. Yes, the veterans administration office where his disability was rated would have his record and he can obtain copies there. If he has been rated 70 per cent he should be drawing a disability pension. Contact your veterans' administration office.

Q. I am a veteran of World War II. I was inducted December 8, 1942, and was honorably discharged February 19, 1943. I am a farmer and need help on the farm. They told me I am not eligible. Can you tell me?—J. A., Scottsboro, Ala.

A. It appears that you are short the required 90 days service, unless your discharge was due to a disability. Suggest you contact your county agent and see what he can do for you.

Q. I am a mother of seven children. I am unable to work. My husband is a veteran of World War I and since he has deserted the family for another woman, we have no support and he says he won't support us. Is there any chance of getting a pension for me and the children from this veteran?—Mrs. D. V. E., Portageville, Mo.

A. There appears to be none as long as he is alive and suffers no disability. The courts are available to you for support of your children.

Q. Is a former divorced wife of a World War I veteran who has not remarried and to whom alimony had been decreed, eligible for a pension when the divorce was procured by the veteran?—Mrs. S. R., Atlanta, Ga.

A. Yes, providing you are a widow and lived with him for 10 years and was not at fault in the divorce and providing, if you are without children, your income is not more than $1,000 annually. You should apply to the veterans' administration office at Atlanta to determine your eligibility, however.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for May 5

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

TWO BROTHERS LEARN TOLERANCE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 3:14-17; Luke 9:46; 1 John 4:7, 8.

GOLDEN TEXT—And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also.—1 John 4:21.

Intolerance is soundly condemned in our day, and we agree that the spirit which hates or hinders a man because he is of a certain race or color is definitely wrong. Even within Christian circles we could well learn more of that fine spirit of Christ which is epitomized in the words, "no respecter of persons."

A word of caution is needed, however, lest we come to extend our tolerance to that which is sinful, wicked or destructive. One should never tolerate poison in a child's food, or in his textbooks. One does not tolerate a fire while it destroys one's house. Nor should one be tolerant of false teaching which breaks down faith in the Bible as the Word of God.

James and John were outstanding in their places of leadership for God. We learn in our lesson for today that

I. God Wants Powerful Men (Mark 3:14-17).

There seems to be an impression current in some places that being a Christian is practically synonymous with being a weak, frightened, negative person without either personality or power.

The fact is that the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ rightly interpreted, and fully received into the heart and life of a man, brings such a tremendously enriching and transforming experience that it appeals to all, including the vital, dynamic type.

These two men were "the sons of thunder"; that is, they had that flashing alertness and power of personality which made them quick to understand and decisive in action. True, it showed itself in an impatience which was wrong and a desire to bring down judgment, when they should have shown compassion, but that was power out of control, always a dangerous thing.

II. God Wants Balanced Men (Luke 9:49, 50).

Power goes to a man's head, and he needs the balance of God to keep him from going astray. Then too, strong men have intense loyalties and are not afraid to assert them, and are prone to condemn all who do not conform.

John was here exhibiting that dreadfully sectarian viewpoint which persists even in our day. To him it was not enough that a man was doing the Lord's work; he must either join their particular circle or quit. He was willing to stop a work of grace because this disciple of Christ was not in the regular group. That same spirit prevails today.

One wonders how some narrow sectarians can read the words of Jesus without blushing in shame and rushing to his feet for forgiveness and cleansing.

God wants dynamic men to work for him; but he wants them to be poised and balanced in their dealings with others, especially with the brethren.

III. God Wants Patient Men (Luke 9:51-56).

The friction between the Jews and the Samaritans dated from the time when the latter—a half-Gentile people—were denied the right to help in building the temple. That became the foundation for long and bitter strife, which showed up in such a discourteous act as to refuse a night's lodging to travelers because their destination was the hated city of Jerusalem.

Their offense viewed from another angle was far more than a bitter lack of courtesy, for they were turning from their door the Son of God, the Lord of glory.

Stubbard prejudice combined with spiritual ignorance to make this tense and explosive situation. The sons of thunder had an answer ready—let's blow them off the earth. Simple, wasn't it? Yes, but neither right nor kind. These poor people should have drawn forth their compassion, not their hatred or a desire for revenge.

Whenever and wherever you see a man set to get revenge on another, you see a man who knows nothing of the true spirit of Christ (v. 55).

IV. God Wants Loving Men (1 John 4:7, 8).

Love is not merely something that God shows toward men or inspires in their hearts. God is love. Being God, he is love, and that love is not a passive quality but an active one. He loves.

Because he is love, those who profess to belong to him are also to love one another, to love a world lost in sin, yes, to love even the utterly unlovely.

Volumes have been written on this subject, but here we must be satisfied just to state the fact and to ask ourselves the direct question. Do I manifest the love of God in my life? Well, do you?

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Act Ala Circus. When a pilot wants to make an emergency exit from a jet fighter he pulls a trigger and "shoots" safely out of the cockpit. A cylinder cannon containing a charge comparable to that in a 75 millimeter shell is attached by piston to the pilot seat which is ejected when the flyer "pulls the trigger" to bail out. The experts, praise them, also have devised a mechanism that automatically releases the cockpit canopy above the pilot's head to permit his exit.

PASSE BEFORE IT FLIES? Sunday April 28th a new bomber a giant flying wing was announced by the Army. Revolutionary in appearance-it has a range about one-fourth greater than the B-29. All that's amazing-except that experts have recently said this about bombers. Quote: Rocket Robots outmode huge bombers. The bombers job of destroying targets can be done more efficiently and cheaply by explosive and incendiary carrying rockets. Unquote.

UP-PORTUNITY Vets seeking C. A. A. Aircraft and Engine licenses can obtain financial help from the Veterans Administration for on-the-job training and schooling. A free "mechanics information package" is available by writing the Office of Aviation Information, Civil Aeronautics Administration, Washington 25, D. C. The government also offers a new 41 page publication, illustrated in color, entitled "Weather Wisdom for Private Pilots-REALM OF FLIGHT". AROUND RUBINKAM Circling the field-I noticed 4 Navy Vultee BT 1... After landing, Ray Starzyk, flight instructor-said they'd been flown in by Bruce Ramon who plans to have them NC'd for civilian resale and use. Pauline Nickeloff, Flight Office Manager, reports every cloud had a silver lining for Bob Blake, Fred Cheffer and Hugo Boyle-all earned their Private License.

PROSPERI Landing at Prosperi Airport-I learned that they recently had a "Classroom in the Sky". Lester Palmer wasn't satisfied merely teaching aeronautics at Midlothian Elementary School in Tinley Park. He decided to know his subject from the ground up-and "went after and got" his private license. Last week he took 20 students for a ride-showing them actual cloud formations-landings take-offs other sky maneuvers. Wilber Cunningham, who recently graduated from the Moody Bible Institute, also won his Eagles Wings. He plans to use a plane for missionary work. First solos at Prosperi include two Tinley Park returned vets: Wallace Wyman and Raleigh Bagby. An Instructor's Rating now belongs to Charley Harmel.

CIRCLING CHICAGO-HAMMOND I noticed the enormous framework of a new hanger-also a 40 foot long oval shaped excavation. "Downstairs", modern thinking Manager Dow said the excavation will be filled with a super service station for planes-complete with 3 Servaplane gas pumps-air, electricity and water.

• A pig is never thrifty if he's carrying a bellyful of worms! That's why it's just good, everyday hog sense to worm them after weaning time with PTZ. PTZ destroys over 90% of the nodular worms and is as effective as other well-known remedies against large roundworms.

• Use PTZ Powder to worm pigs. Mix it with feed according to the directions on the package. If the premises are not too badly infested with worms, one worming with PTZ should be sufficient.

IAA States Position
On OPA Extension

Position of the Illinois Agricultural Association on legislation extending price control beyond June 30, 1946 was outlined in a statement issued by the Association's Board of Directors.

Representing 125,000 members in Illinois, the Association directors stipulated four provisions to be incorporated in any extension of OPA.

These are: "First, consumer food subsidies must be eliminated rapidly and according to a definite schedule terminating not later than Dec. 31, '46.

"2nd, as consumer food subsidies are removed, retail price ceilings must be adjusted to offset the subsidy removal. 3rd, all OPA controls must be eliminated according to a definite schedule as rapidly as production or supplies reach specified normal levels. All controls, except possibly those on rents and a very few important scarce items, should be eliminated by March 30, '47.

"4th, the price control agency must recognize increased costs of production and be required to reflect such increased costs by immediate adjustments in price ceilings."

The statement further pointed out that, "Farmers have supported all honest attempts to control inflation. They have insisted upon a balanced budget and that price control measures be applied and maintained uniformly and equitably over industry, labor and agriculture. This has not been done. While prices of farm products have been kept under rigid ceilings, farm operating costs have advanced sharply. The farm labor supply has been reduced and farm wage rates greatly increased by the government-sponsored high wage and short hours policy in industry.

"Strikes, increased labor costs and unreasonable OPA price ceilings have combined to restrict the output of farm equipment and other essential industrial products.

"High wages, huge consumer food subsidies and low food price ceilings have encouraged excessive use and outright waste of vital food products. Farmers now insist that definite action be taken to end this intolerable situation. Throughout the war years farmers produced unprecedented quantities of food. Since the war's end they have kept production at near record levels."

RICH MILK BEST BY TEST

Complete pasteurized dairy service in

"...AND THEN HE SAYS TO THE HIRED MAN: 'THINGS ARE GOING TO BE DIFFERENT
AROUND HERE!'"

"... Was the boss burned up! Every can of milk came back—rejected! Just between us girls, I suspected that his milking equipment wasn't clean, but what could I say?"

Tell him this, Mabel:

Milk rejections and midget milk checks aren't always your fault. Usually they're caused by handling milk in dairy utensils that haven't been properly cleaned and sterilized.

Tell him, too, that:

the best way to make certain his equipment will be clean is to have plenty of hot water on hand in the milkhouse—the kind that comes from an Electric Dairy Water Heater. Then all he'll have to do is turn the tap and there it is—gallons and gallons of clean, piping hot water that will cut grease and chase dirt in a flash.

You might add that Electric Dairy Water Heaters are now available in limited quantities... that the sooner he gets one, the quicker he'll have more marketable milk.

Electricity for Water Heating and other farm chores is available to more than 91% of all the farms in the area served by this Company.

IN MEMORIAM

HIRSCH—Anna M. In memory of our dear Mother who passed away one year ago May 2, 1945.

A picture I see of a beautiful face, Reflecting an image of heavenly grace. A gift of the highest and sacredest worth,

That God ever gave to His people on earth.

A picture which shows many traces of care

And yet an expression of sweetest love there,

The works of the rarest and loveliest art,

A picture of Mother that's framed in my heart,

And tho she has crossed to her haven of rest

The print of her foot steps again I can see,

Her voice I hear saying, 'My dear follow me.'

Miss Helen Rix, teacher of the 5th and 6th grades of the Mokena Public school, is taking the pupils of her room on a trip to Brookfield Zoo. They will leave by Greyhound bus from the school at 10 A. M. Some of the mothers will accompany them.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rinke received word last week that their daughter, Hyacinth who is a nurse with the navy is ill in the Naval hospital in Boston with bronchial pneumonia. She is reported as convalescing satisfactorily.

The Senior girls of St. John's Evangelical church enjoyed their 3rd annual outing in Chicago April 27. They visited Maxwell Street, the world's famous ghetto; Hull House Settlement, founded by Jane Adams. Jate Kushidu, an American Japanese and resident at Hull House, explained the organization.

They also visited a Mexican shop; the James Ward Thorn miniature rooms at the Art Institute, then proceeded to see the movie and stage show at the Chicago theatre. Dinner was enjoyed at an Italian restaurant, the Tivoli Inn, where they learned to roll spaghetti. Those who went on this trip were: Mrs. Milton Geuther, teacher; Shirley Lorenz, Carrol Benson, Dorothy Rauch, Elaine Spiess, Ruth Shevlin, Donna Williams, and Helen Reid.

The next monthly meeting of the Mokena Village Board will be held Tuesday evening May 7 in the Village hall.

Prison Sentences

Criminals were not given prison sentences until quite late in the christian era. The only conception of punishment for crime was death or the infliction of bodily pain; wrongdoers were held in prison only until they were tried or executed.

HOME IN NUERNBERG . . . War correspondent with Hertha Strobl and her mother. The Strobls make their home in what is left of a castle gate house. This is in the American zone of occupation.

EUROPE'S LITTLE PEOPLE — 1946

Bombed German Family Lives Amid Ruins of Famous Castle

By PAULINE FREDERICK
WNU Foreign Correspondent.

NUERNBERG.—In 1938, in a humble home in the shadow of a great castle, a little German girl was born. Her name was Hertha Strobl. I saw Hertha today as I stood in the biting winter wind on the hill that commands the ruins of the legendary old inner city of Nuernberg. Hertha had run out of the shambles of the castle to ask me for chewing gum. I couldn't help following her back. That's how I found out that a lot of things have happened to her in eight short years.

When Hertha was born she had a seven-year-old sister. The simple Strobl home was on a narrow street at the foot of the castle in the quaint old city whose walls and towers once appeared on Christmas cards the world over, and where Albrecht Durer lived and painted. But there were other things going on in Nuernberg when Hertha was born. An evil man by the name of Julius Streicher had started here a fire of anti-Jewism that was sweeping Germany.

One day Hertha's father had to leave his humble job as a packer of dental supplies and go to the Russian front as a soldier. But Hertha was too young to know much about this. Soon after the days of the fairy tales came to an end. Hertha told me about them in the kitchen of the place where they are living, with her mother and sister adding a word now and then. The home is a little three-room gatehouse built into one of the towers of the castle wall which miraculously stands in the bomb-shattered ruins. Over the doorway there is a Latin motto etched into the stone and dated 1561. Roughly translated it says, "There is nothing greater to be desired than to deserve well from the state."

Hertha's sister was sitting at the window peeling potatoes and her mother stood beside the little stove on which there was a pot of cabbage cooking. The two small rooms that ran across the back of the kitchen held single cots with feather-beds. The windows opened onto the shattered spires and towers of the old city below. A crude, wooden-wheel doll carriage with a rag doll in it held a place of honor among the spare neat furnishings. There was no heat in these rooms.

The tears came to Hertha's eyes as though she were angry when she told about the time she was in the hospital when a bomb struck it. Then, one day when she was back home, the great horns sounded again, and her mother hastily took her and her sister to the basement

CHOCOLATE . . . This little girl, Hertha Strobl, is clutching a precious chocolate bar. She wants to run a chocolate store when she grows up.

"We Bombed First," German Boys

I learned from two little boys that they had nothing to do because there was no fuel to heat the school house that day. I asked them what they thought of the trial of Nazi war criminals. Echoing sentiments that seemed a little beyond their years, they said that the trial was "too good for them." I asked what they would do and one of them, betraying a streak of blood-thirstiness that seemed to indicate the unhealthy influence under of their home. When great blasts shook the house, Hertha said in her childish German, "I thought I was going to be dead." When the bombing stopped and they came up to look around, there was no longer any Strobl house — there were not many houses at all left in the city. Even the greater part of Hertha's beautiful castle was in ruins. But what broke her heart most was that her precious doll and doll carriage were gone.

Frau Strobl took her two daughters and went to an air-raid shelter nearby to live for a while. That was 50 feet down in the ground and in a concrete room where there was only electric light and no heat. When Herr Strobl came back from Russia, he found the little gatehouse at the castle and the family moved in there, but there are still a lot of others living in bunkers.

Hertha and her mother and sister were warmly dressed in heavy clothes that did not look worn and they had on leather-soled shoes. Like many Germans in this sector the appearance of the clothing is good, and there are any number of furs, especially red fox, here in Bavaria. But these are the last of the clothes — there is little or nothing to change to. However, children under six are permitted one pair of shoes a year.

But if Hertha's mother was endeavoring to make ends meet, there was one thing that Hertha was hoping with all her heart would be changed soon. Last Easter there was no candy, but just before Christmas there was a small allotment and this Easter there probably will be some. I asked Hertha what she wanted to do when she grew up, and without a moment's hesitation she said,

"Keep a chocolate shop!"

There was one other question I was interested in putting to this little German girl. The names of the prisoners in the dock of the International Military tribunal outside the walls of the old city did not mean anything to her, although she said she had heard of Julius Streicher. She had never seen any of the Nazi leaders. So I asked if her teacher were to tell her to draw a picture that represented war to her, what she would draw. She thought for a minute and then she said firmly,

"I would draw a castle and houses — and the houses would all be bombed."

And probably she would include in the destruction, a doll carriage with a doll in it. A little girl of tender years who knows the true meaning of war.

There is more in the American zone — in all four zones in Germany — to take care of than just seeing that there is enough food and housing and clothing for the people through the winter. There is a lot of wrong thinking that has to be taken care of, too, and that care has to start with the youngest who has never lived under Nazism. The planter of this harvest of hate may be dead, but the tares he sowed still could choke out the good seed.

THE present year may not be the golden age of sport as far as outstanding ability goes. I can see little chance that it will produce masterpieces even close to Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Tommy Hitchcock, Rogers Hornsby, Bill Tilden, Red Grange and Man o' War. Not to overlook Earl Sande.

R. Hornsby

But the year on ahead will outclass the postwar period of the first world conflict when it comes to the matter of attendance and the actual amount of gold or its equivalent taken in at the turnstiles.

This 1946 season will make all other past years look like the tag end of a depression so far as crowds and cash are concerned. The recent basketball season flattened all past attendance records. We have had over 50,000 people clamoring to pay $20 a seat for a non-title fight, meaning Graziano and Servo.

California and Florida race tracks have left the past far behind in this same respect. Two Alabama football squads, made up from Alabama players, recently fought it out before 25,000 spectators in Birmingham. Racing at Jamaica has already taken long leaps beyond last year's earlier marks.

The super-brilliant stars who followed the last world war may be missing, but there are still enough good ones to keep the human mass rolling in the general direction of the next show, whatever game it might happen to be.

Only Warming Up

But these matters are only in the warm-up division. The real harvest from the golden crop is still on beyond us.

Baseball expects to shatter all past crowd records by a wide margin. The Yankees hope to play before something approximating two million at home. The Dodgers would be right alongside if there was only enough parking room for the human frame. The Giants won't be far away if their ball club holds up.

The 450 million dollar bet at New York tracks last season is likely to reach or pass 550 million dollars this year. We have seen crowded Derby and Preakness years before, but nothing to what this next May will offer in these two better than 100 thousand dollar tests. The Yankee stadium hasn't the attendance space to equal the crowds that saw the two Tunney - Dempsey shows, but the Louis-Conn meeting will outdraw both financially in the way of extra carloads of cash. They are already talking about Graziano being involved in a million dollar gate and the rock-fisted entry hasn't even a title.

The United States Golf association is dead sure that the open at Canterbury, Cleveland, in June and the amateur at Baltusrol in September will run up far higher figures than either has ever drawn in the past. The crowds who want to see a contest have already far outgrown the limited spaces through spring and summer and fall.

On a recent tour of the southeast we were often asked how long the money would hold out. Apparently it is going to hold out for at least another year. No one can say yet in just what fighting shape either Louis or Conn will be, but the rush to contribute at least three million dollars is still under way with the contest coming late in June.

Apparently it isn't the entry list but the game that is drawing them out. As far as one can see neither the Derby nor the Preakness nor the Belmont has any Count Fleet or any Whirlaway or Alsab running. No outstanding star has yet shown for these events, but this won't affect the size of the populace on hand.

Baseball comes nearer approaching the first golden age in playing class. For baseball still has the Cardinals, DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Bob Feller and many others with a high standard of excellence, including Newhouse and Wakefield of the Tigers.

Some one recently asked how large the crowds would be if Ruth, Dempsey, Jones, Tilden, Hornsby, were back in their prime. The answer is they couldn't be any larger for the simple reason there isn't any more room. Today they'll rush to see anything at any price. Apparently everything is worth $50 — except $50.

Genius in Sports

What is this "know-how," this genius or instinct for superlative play in sport? Ty Cobb's father was a Georgia judge who had no particular interest in any game. Ty Cobb's children had no interest in baseball. Yet Bill Tilden once told me that young Ty Cobb might have been a tennis champion.

Old man DiMaggio never had the slightest idea of what baseball meant. Yet he produced Joe, Dom and Vince DiMaggio.

New Columbia Sheep—Made-to-Order Breed

Developed for Dual-Purpose Requirements

The need for a breed of sheep that would produce both wool and meat efficiently resulted in work being undertaken by the USDA about 1912 to find such a breed.

The result of years of extensive work was the introduction of the Columbia sheep, which combined the most desirable characteristics of the Lincoln and Rambouillet. The breed was more than a quarter of a century in being developed.

The breed has been developed to such a point that it has its own registry organization, the Columbia Sheep Breeders' association. It is primarily a range sheep but is being used to a moderate extent in farming areas.

Columbia sheep are free from wool-blindness and skinfolds. The body is long, but is symmetrically proportioned with a good balance between width and depth. In 12 months a typical Columbia ewe grows a fleece weighing about 12 pounds, which contains approximately 50 per cent clean wool about 3½ inches long.

An Idaho Columbia ram showing the desirable characteristics of this newer breed.

New Corn Ear Worm Control Recommended

A new contact insecticide has recently been developed for the control of corn ear worm on sweet corn and hybrid seed corn, as a substitute for pyrethrum.

The spray is a liquid solution of styrena dibromide in a mineral oil and is applied to the corn silks as soon as their ends appear brown. It is necessary to treat more than once as all ears do not show brown at the same time. The spray is applied with a hand applicator which measures a 20 drop dosage from a half pint container.

Feather Fabric Will Add to Farm Income

The washed, stretched and dried fibers are wound on spools.

America's poultry industry can produce 35 million men's suits annually. A new feather fabric that looks like wool but is warmer, softer and lighter, has been developed by USDA specialists.

Feather protein is converted into fiber by treating the feathers with a reducing agent and a special type of wetting agent, or detergent, in water solution, then forcing the resulting spinning solution, or "dope," through the tiny holes of a spinnerette into an acid-and-salt solution that sets the streams of dope into fibers. The fibers are then stretched and dried and treated to remove the detergent so that the regenerated protein is left in true fiber form.

It is not expected that feather fabrics, due to small volume available, will ever prove a serious economical threat to cotton or wool, nevertheless feathers do offer additional revenue for the poultryman, and will compete more with higher priced fabrics.

Cultivation Increases Bermuda Grass Yields

Oklahoma experiments have proved that disking the grass sod of bermuda lightly every other year will cause an increase in yield of about 26 per cent. The tests were made on a thin or poor stand of grass.

It was found that bermuda would respond to heavier disking than the common native grass. Tillage seemed to prevent the grasses from lying in the center of the clumps.

Odd Boat Races

Differing from all other boat races are those held in England for a week each June by the crews of the 17 colleges at Cambridge and the 22 at Oxford, says Collier's. Instead of all shells racing abreast toward a goal, they are grouped in three divisions which race by themselves with their boats stretched out in a single line 150 feet apart, the position in line being determined by previous races.

The object of the contest, therefore, is to overcome and bump the boat ahead which entitles the bumping crew to move up one place until it eventually reaches the head of its division and is promoted into the next.
